The flying group is made up of those which need to remain on our back air field to maintain because so few more could risk landing.

Enthusiastically attracted to the new rights of victory, the great cities of the world, London, Birmingham, Manchester, Glasgow and Memphis have come to Chicago to enjoy the Golden Week of the peace and to get the best of the food and the music advantages.

In months past, an number of at least four planes a low over the field for emergency landings.

On one occasion, however, large army plane was in the air and was forced to land here. It glided down, one of its two fall into a mud rut in the runway causing it to flip on its back resulting in inspectors accused a sabotage and costing some twenty thousand dollars. The passengers were rescued.

What American beverage was a favorite before
July 4, 1776?

Beer is an American tradition, with the fathers of our country and in 2 out of 3 homes today. The greatest part of beer sales are for home consumption. In fact, beer is included in the Federal Consumer's Price Index along with other basic food items in the family market basket.

Over $4 million is paid into the Mississippi treasury each year by the legally-regulated beer industry. Schools, hospitals and rural roads benefit from this important revenue and the industry is the 5th largest taxpayer in the state. Mississippi's tax on malt beverages remains one of the highest in the nation.

2000 retailers and 27 wholesalers of beer in Mississippi have over 200 million invested in buildings, trucks and equipment. They employ 25,000 Mississippians. Yes, the beer industry means important dollars for the welfare and progress of all citizens.

In commenting upon their debatable conclusion, our good Commissioners GILMAN, offered some interesting comments about the trial proceedings of the Japanese Court.

[illegible][illegible]

The record of recent events led the U. S. News and World News editorial board to conclude that the Supreme Court is "in a state of confusion." The board's editorial, "Harmful in Washington," and the article, "Supreme Court—Congress—White House in Shuffling of the Cards," The magazine correctly concluded, in our opinion, that "out of it all lies a conflict that runs through Congress, the Courts and the Executive Branch of government. This conflict is between those who want to use the power of government to maintain an ever wider range of order, from regulating race relations to controlling the sale of alcohol to private business, and those who believe that government power should be held in check as much as possible. In other words, we are seeing a continuation of the struggle between the Hamiltonian and the Jeffersonian philosophies of government, the philosophy of the constitutional power of government to govern and the philosophy of Jefferson in the words of his letter to the president: 'Less is more.'"

The editorial also noted that the recent highly controversial decision by the Supreme Court to deny habeas corpus to the 130 prisoners of the Japanese-American War was "a decision that has shocked the conscience of the nation and the justices of the Court by the Senate every four years to the appointment of a special subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee to investigate these recent decisions, especially as the House power of Congressional investigating committees, weakened by these recent decisions, and made enforcement of Criminal Justice more difficult, it appears that at least one of the purposes of the new court may be to guard the F.B.I., with the prevailing idea that

A high-contrast, black and white photograph of a textured surface, possibly a book cover or a piece of paper, showing a grid-like pattern of raised and recessed areas. The image is characterized by deep shadows and bright highlights, creating a strong sense of three-dimensional texture. The pattern consists of a series of rectangular or square indentations arranged in a regular grid. The lighting is harsh, coming from the side, which emphasizes the ridges and the depth of the grooves. The overall effect is one of a tactile, almost architectural surface.

Dr. H. G. Wallace, nationally known economist and former chairman of the President's Council on Economic Advisors, one of the Conference speakers put it this way:

The "rolling of this contention is clear evidence that the American public is waking up to some basic economic realities and beginning to question whether the phenomenal prosperity of the last decade is fundamentally sound and capable of being continued at present rates. We should also be pointing the book to the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Congress and the Federal Reserve system. It is most peculiar the truth to say that the real source of inflation in post-war United States has lain in the market place—in the institutions and practices of labor union bargaining and corporation price administration.

INNOVANT BANISHES ALL NOISE DUE TO VIBRATION

Schedule clock fear of this year's ahead Fedders Air Conditioner, the smoothest-running, smoothest-performing compressor ever engineered into a wall mount. • And it's so quiet it's like a top on a slight pull. • Controlled by two 300-degree vibration isolators that absorb most in-room sound, the powerful Innovant compressor works as smoothly as though it had no moving parts. It's the quietest ever. • So other air conditioners can't even come close.
